

Tina's Dice Digest

September 2020 Edition (#9)

It's beginning of October, and that means it's time for no. 9 of my Dice Digest!

Let's start off with new dice from HD. Nothing super fancy this time around. A new wispy white and light blue set, something new for their Luminary line, and two glitter sets. The pink ones seem to be reminiscent of the much beloved GenCon glitter dice, but remains to be seen until we see actual photos of these that aren't product shots.

Udixi has also been very prolific of late. More so than HD, it seems. We have a few new chunky glitter two-tone sets with subtle swirls.

On top of that, they are expanding their wizard font line with Borealis style sets in new colours. (Kinda wish they'd do this in a more normal font, though.) If you hate bubbles, beware. I think we need to expect these to have them, like the previous sets in this mould also did.

Please note that the clear set is very similar to one of the recent Eclipse Dice Kickstarter exclusive sets. Eclipse has confirmed that they are working with Udixi for their Kickstarter, so it's possible these are basically the same dice in another mould. Suffice to say, Eclipse wasn't very happy about this.

Also new are dice with card game symbol inclusions (clubs, diamonds, hearts and spades).

And last but not least, we have panda dice! Need I say more?

September 2020 Edition (#9)

Oh boy, Die Hard Dice is at it again with new designs and expansion of their Avalore and Mythica lines.

Avalore is gets two new sets that have a prismatic surface effect, and Mythica gets a new Dreamscape Frostfell metal set.

Also new is the new metal line Dracona, with a dragonscale surface effect that has a prismatic rainbow shimmer.

Yusun introduces giant metal dice in a gear wheel design. It doesn't say how large exactly these are, but there's a regular sized d20 for reference, so that should give you an idea.

If you fancy to get into the Halloween spirit, they also offer metal skull dice with a blood spatter effect.

It may be past noon, but it's time for coffee! ☕

These cute dice have actual coffee beans in them.

You know those times when you've had way too much caffeine and you're playing DND hyper and rolling dice so intensely that they fly out of the tray? Heh, yeah, me too. I can't wait to sling these babies around in those moments. PEW PEW

Now in the shop! Limited supply.

Not that many Kickstarters this time around. This one only just went online – dice for food lovers. What you can pledge for here is clear dice with food related inclusions, such as (fake) strawberry candy, chocolate sprinkles, mini hamburgers, avocados, and much more.

The Kickstarter will run all through October, and is still below its goal, but it's early days and may get funded more or less easily. Time will tell. One set of these will run you $14.

This is more dice adjacent than actual dice, as it's a silicone mould for ice cubes in the shapes of polyhedral dice.

For around $25 you can get an ice cube mould for a full polyset, and you still have about two weeks to back this one. It's already funded way over goal – it seems that gamers are excited about accessorizing their game nights in style.
